

TOP PICKS*BOTTOMS UP

The best pink gins for 2022, to jazz up your drinks shelf

LOOKING for a new tippie? If you love nothing more than winding down with a G&T in hand, consider giving the classic drink a fruity twist with the best pink gins.

Apart from having a cool aesthetic thanks to the rosy hue, pink gin grew in popularity back in 2013 with the launch of the UK-based drinks company Pinkster Gin.

This variation was founded by Stephen Marsh who discovered that raspberries are great paired with juniper. After soaking them in alcohol, this resulted in a tasty and vibrant drink that would inspire other infusions.

Today, there are loads of pink gins on the market with equally tantalizing flavors from strawberry and rhubarb to grapefruit.

If you're new to the world of gin, pink gin may be the beverage for you particularly if you like a sweeter taste.

Simply pair it with a tonic and add a garnish for a totally irresistible drink that isn't just reserved for the summertime but can also be enjoyed any time of year.

If you want to add a new flavor flare to your refreshments shelf, take a look at our pick of the best pink gins.

Bitter Truth Pink Gin, $36.50 (750ml) from B&B Spirit Shop - buy here

Deserving of a firm place in your liquor collection, Bitter Truth's take on pink gin features juniper in the foreground and a complex mix of fruity and floral aromas.

We know that sweet flavors aren't for everyone, if you would prefer to steer clear of this in favor of spicier notes then this is the perfect drink.

Created to please the tastes of modern gin drinkers, this incorporates caraway, licorice, and fennel for more depth of flavor and an aromatic taste.

This is best served as a G&T, martini, or as part of a gin-based cocktail.

